A special E-blast for students/ECRs only:
Announcement of our first ECR/student webinar
+ A short 5-minute survey

Dear ISBNPA Students and Early Career Researchers members

Through this E-blast, we want to announce our first webinar specially organized for students and ECRs. We'd also like to ask for your participation in a short survey on your ideas about the ISBNPA student/ECR network.

Since 2015, we are trying to improve the student/ECR network of the ISBNPA community. We would like to create more attractive and interesting network and communication activities and workshops that address your academic and networking needs.

As part of this, we are working on developing events, such as webinars and activities at the annual meeting, which are specifically designed to support students and ECRs. On Thursday 27 April 2016 at 16:00 EST (21:00 London, 22:00 Paris, April 28th 06:00 Melbourne), we launch our first webinar about 'Tips and tricks for finding research money now: traditional and non-traditional funding sources' with Prof. David Crawford and Prof. Charlie Foster as presenters (more information + registration button?).

The Special Interest Group (SIG) Committee and the Communications Committee kindly ask for your help for the betterment of the services ISBNPA provides to its members.

To participate in this webinar - ISBNPA members have this information 1 week in advance to the public advertisement, so register as soon as possible (limit 100 participants) - click HERE.

We'd also like to learn more about what other types of support we could offer. And who is best suited to give us insight into how we can support you? Indeed, you! Through a short questionnaire (Can you spare us 5 minutes?), we want to learn more about your ideas for this student/ECR network. You can fill in the questionnaire through the following link. Your participation will help us tremendously to further build a great student/ECR network.

We hope to see you at our first webinar!
Kind regards,

Sofie Compernolle & Wendy Van Lippevelde
Your representatives in the Executive Committee of ISBNPA
